Peter's an experienced Master of Ceremonies and Toastmaster, skilled in presiding over all types of event. Based in Silverstone, Northamptonshire, Peter's less than 1 hour from London, Birmingham, Oxford and Cambridge, but will travel to any location on request, including overseas.

Peter's trusted to perform at the highest level, and in the past 3 weeks alone, has officiated at award ceremonies and dinners at the Grosvenor, the Park Lane Hotel and the Hilton Park Lane in London.

A Master of Ceremonies is much more than a loud voice in a red coat. They'll work closely with the event organizer, venue management and catering staff, and act as facilitator for the event to ensure that everything is in place, and runs smoothly, efficiently and on time. They'll glue together the venue management, caterers, music providers etc, each of whom have their own agenda and view of how the event should proceed, and ensure they're all following the same agenda. They'll be happy to organize auctions, raffles etc, and if required will take on the role of auctioneer, using their skills to maximize the funds raised.

During the event itself, in addition to making all announcements, presiding over the receiving line, announcing speeches and toasts, the Master of Ceremonies is a calming influence, remaining unobtrusive, inspiring confidence, and keeping always a watchful eye for the little things that need attention for the event to run flawlessly.

A good Master of Ceremonies will always gauge how formal or otherwise the event needs to be, and can alter his delivery to be as formal or humorous as the situation demands. And, of course, the distinctive uniform of the Master of Ceremonies, and their flair for public speaking, add gravitas, pomp and spectacle to your event

Peter's an intermediate French and Italian speaker, and therefore able to preside over events where correct pronunciation of names and announcements in these languages is of paramount importance. Peter's also able to correctly pronounce Arabic names and honorifics, and would welcome the opportunity to attend any event where correct Arabic pronunciation is needed.

Events covered include weddings of all faiths, civil partnerships, corporate dinners, awards nights, sales conferences, charity balls, charity lunches, charity dinners, graduation ceremonies, masonic ladies evenings, dinner dances, round table functions, cocktail parties, event openings, anniversaries, birthdays, exhibitions, product launches, rotary nights, civic functions, society events, livery company & guild meetings and celebrations, embassy balls, dinners and ceremonies, bar mitzvah and bat mitzvah ceremonies.
